Among other wonders of the forthcoming French exhibition there is to be a gigantic aquarium, the front of which alone is to measure 100 feet Every sort of fish is to be collected therein for the amusement of the public, and even sharks, cod and porpoises are to exhibit their peculiar habits and customs in grottoes and caves, which are to be excavated in the floor of the building, and filled with sea water.

A brilliant coup d'etat of Fenians on the Maine frontier is telegraphed. Two boats, size not stated, laden with Fenians it is supposed, number not stated, armed, millers not stated, effected a landing on Monday night, May 21st, on Indian Island, near Eastport. Several rounds of shot or round shot were exchanged, with whom, not stated, results not stated. A British war steamer then got up steam and steamed to the scene of action, and the supposed enemy retreated, whither, not stated Historians will prepare for further lucid particulars.

The House of Representatives has made an important change in the tax bill relating to cigars, as follows. "On cigarettes or small cigars finclosed in a wrapper or blinder, and not more than 3½ inches in length, and on cigars made with twisted heads, the market value of which, tax included, is not over $8 per 1,000, a tax of $2 per 1,000 on all other cigars $4 per 1,000, and 40 per cent ad valorem" This feature having been agreed to in defiance of the Ways and Means Committee, their chairman gave notice that he should move at the proper time to amend the bill, so as to fix the tariff on imported cigars at the same rate in addition to the duty already levied. Importers should make a note of it.

Lemuel Cook, the last of the officially recognized Revolutionary soldiers, died on the night of May 20th, at Clarendon, Orleans county, N. Y., at the age of 102 years It appears to be undoubted that he was the last of Washington's era. He was born in Plymouth, Vermont. At the age of 17 he entered the army of the Revolution, first in the dragoons, and then in the infantry, under Col. Sheldon Mr Cook was three years in the army, was present at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, and took an honorable discharge at the close of the war, signed by Gen. Washington Mr Cook removed to Western New York to reside more than 30 years ago. He has been in feeble health for a year or two past, but up to 1864 was quite active. His funeral took place on the 23d, at Clarendon, with military and Masonic honors.

The Great Money Panic.

A London correspondent of the New York Herald says that no language can depict the money panic that prevailed in London the second week in May. Says he:

Men seemed suddenly bereft of reason. In an instant all confidence and all credit was shaken. When it was announced that Overend, Gurney & Co had closed their doors, business was entirely suspended. Men gathered together in the streets, and talked in excited whispers. Evening came on, but the city was still crowded. The banks kept open, not to do business, but that customers might come in and consult upon the crisis. Such a scene of terror and dismay is seldom witnessed. If an enemy had been marching on London to sack the city the trepidation could not have been greater.

The liabilities of Overend, Gurney & Co. were fifty millions of dollars. The correspondent further says:

The nominal capital was £5,000,000; the subscribed capital was £1,500, 000, and of this 500,000 was paid to the retiring partner as the price for the good will of the business. After nine months trading the company has stopped with liabilities to the amount of $14,000,000. It is supposed that the actual losses are about £10,000,000. So that the shareholders have lost all their money.

How can we account for this catastrophe? How did a company with £1,000,000 sterling in its coffers in August, and with such an immense credit as to be able to incur such liabilities of $14,000,000, have to stop payment in May? The explanation is easy and interesting, and I beg to say that it refers not to Overend, Gurney & Co. only, but to many of the financial companies

You must have noticed the high rate of interest that has for a long time ruled in London. Commerce has been thriving; India and the Colonies have been exceedingly prosperous, the revenue has been most flourishing, and yet money has been in demand in London at from eight to ten per cent., while on the Continent it has been from four to five per cent. The explanation is this. England has been doing a new, and most dangerous business England has been shoving her credit to the utmost to borrow money for the purpose of investing it in enterprises both at home and abroad which promised to pay a large interest. I doubt not for an instant that for public works in Italy and Austria, English capital and credit has in the last four years been pledged to the extent of about £100,000,000 In fact, England was making half the railroads and building all the great buildings in Europe. This work was done through the agency of the finance companies, who advanced money to the contractors at from twelve to twenty-per cent! Now, consider this position These companies get money from the public on deposit, subject to repayment at two or fifteen days notice, and they invest it in securities that at times cannot be realized for months. The result is inevitable. When a financial crisis comes—as it does periodically—these companies must go to the wall.

From the above remarks you will perceive why the prospect of a Continental war, in which England will not take part, has been so dreaded in the city of London Such a war would shut up English capital and credit to the amount of £100,000,000.

There were, however, special circumstances in the case of Overend, Gurney & Co The Company had been advancing to contractors for railroads. It was a common saying that the London, Chatham and Dover was built on paper. The railroad companies having exhausted their capital and money powers have issued certificates of indebtedness or bills to their contractors. These bills have been freely discounted by Overend, Gurney & Co A few days since it was decided in the Court of Common Pleas that the railway companies had no legal right to give such bills, and that they were not legally recoverable. This, of course, was a terrible blow to Overend, Gurney & Co An enormous amount of these securities became for the time at least, utterly valueless, and this is the main cause of their stoppage When they applied, on Tuesday, to the Bank of England for assistance, the bank Directors refused to receive on any terms the securities that had been condemned by a Court of law

A SOUND UNION PAPER.—The Dayton (Ohio) Sentinel is a sound Union organ. In reply to the insulting demand of the Conservatives that the Radicals must yield to the President—that we must yield to one—the Sentinel puts in this plea. It says, "to advocate the general adoption of polygamy throughout the United States in order that monogamy may not impede the plans of the Mormon rulers, is preposterous in reason to the demand for the party to abdicate its rights to the President, as the only method of avoiding a rupture" It is a funny argument that the great mass of the Union party must surrender their convictions to the few supporters of the President or there will be a row and the majority will be held responsible for the rupture? We don't see it in that light There will be but two parties, Union and Copperhead. Every man has his choice between the two. There is no middle ground.

WILLIAMS CREEK.

The money market was still depressed but the great bulk of the claims were fd working order, and expected in a few days to exhibit an activity and remunerativeness not witnessed since 1863. More attention is being turned to the upper portion of the creek, more or less prospected in 1863, but since discarded as useless. In one claim there, the Man Juan, $2 to the pan has been obtained. On the 6th the Aurora Company washed up 300 ounces being the result of three days' work. On the 10th the Davis Company washed up 98 ounces. Last Chance Company (lucklee) struck a prospect on the 9th of $1 50 to the pan Last Chance Company (claim) are making, from 30 to 50 ounces every two shifts per day dirt is 40 feet wide, The Cameron Company washed up 80 ounces on the 5th and 50 ounces on the 9th; they would have over 300 ounces for the week; they are working on under the town site The Raby Company are averaging 15 ounces a day—The Prefels Flower Company is yielding 100 ounces a week. Work below this claim had been suspended for eight days on account of high water Many other companies are making from wages upward

SPECIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 28 1866

Justice is not Vengeance

If the rebellion were confined to the out of the Union, as claimed by the Democracy, as to be "foreign territory occupying the position in their relation to the country of a nation at war," it follows logically that they had no rights within the Union If Iowa can that when they were conquered they had no rights except such as they acquired or were guaranteed by the laws of nations When an individual or a nation forfeits a right, that right cannot be resumed at the will of the loser but the rehabilitation must depend upon the mutual agreement of the one who forfeited and the one to whom the right was forfeited And the restoration of a right or privilege is usually accompanied by a consideration. At least, the party who grants a right or privilege to another to whom it had not before belonged, may right fully demand something as an equivalent

This is precisely the rule that should operate in the settlement of the national questions of reconstruction The rebels, by the attempt to withdraw from the Union, violated their compact with the other States forfeited their rights under the Constitution and transferred to the Confederate government both their allegiance and their claims for the security of rights. When that attempt was frustrated, they came again within the rule of the United States constitution and laws as offenders against both They did not stand in relation to the government precisely as they did before secession They had voluntarily forfeited the rights and immunities secured by the original compact and could not rightfully resume them without a mutual agreement between the Govern and themselves as to terms.

The Government now, being the disposer of privileges, could bestow its favors without regard to consequences or it could choose the wiser way of adapting its favors to the existing conditions of the late "belligerent" people, and prudently provide for its own security at the same time it restored them to their former status. The Southern people themselves, certainly could not, in view of their late "foreign" allegiance and hostile attitude toward the United States, demand that their offence be entirely ignored and they restored at once, without guarantees, to their old states. This would be to declare that nothing could be hereafter considered a crime.

The Union party of the country, that which preserved the Republic, has never proposed to permanently keep the conquered people in a state of vassalage or degrading inferiority in respect of civil rights or otherwise. There has never been a time when the best means of restoring them to a perfect equality with the other citizens of the United States, at the earliest practicable moment compatible with public safety, has not been an older serious and earnest discussion. But the Union party would have been false to itself, to the half million dead soldiers, to the millions of desolated families, to the men who contributed their millions of money, to the North which was true and the South which was false, if it had not firmly demanded of the offending people, such proper guarantees as would secure the government from a repetition of the terrible experiment of secession This is not "vengeance," nor is it cowardly malice." It is but the exercise of prudential foresight, the omission to exercise which would be almost as criminal as secession itself. So far from being maliciously vengeful, the Union party has been so merciful in its treatment of the notorious rebels as to excite the wonder of other nations, where crimes of far less degree than treason are visited with swift and condign punishment.

That the terms of restoration have been hardly fixed is quite as much attributable to the opposition of the copperheads to any plan but immediate restoration without terms or guarantees, as to any other cause. The basis of reconstruction has finally been offered the States by Congress. The terms are such as cannot wound any but those who are not entitled to regard—active, prominent, leading, voluntary traitors who served treason so zealously and effectively as to be promoted to treason's highest posts of trust! It cannot be considered hard that the instigators and leaders in a crime so gigantic and so heinous as the rebellion, shall not be permitted to hold the high places in the government. It is not so considered when the perpetrator of a forgery or a grand larceny, is disfranchised and disqualified for holding office.

It remains now to be seen whether, when fair, honorable and just terms of restoration are offered, the southern people and the rampant copperheads will be as much in a hurry about the matter as they have hitherto professed themselves.

"Frauds! Frauds!"

The Union State ticket is triumphantly elected—the Legislature is Unionby 13 majority on joint ballot—per consequence the Courier is mad and so is the Berlah B. Herald. The Courier don't know what's the matter but the B. B. Herald talks of "frauds," is content to rest on "frauds" as its explanation. "Frauds" have been for many years Berlah's speciality. He learned the "fraud" business at an early day in Wisconsin while a member of that ancient "association of gentlemen," politely termed the "Forty Thieves." The said "Forty Thieves" conducted the "fraud" business on exact mathematical principles: 1st, Ascertain how many votes would be probably wanted to carry the State—say 1,200. 2d, Employ an agent or agents to send down from La Crosse county, (then on the border) for instance, precisely 1,200 majority. 3d, If 1,200 didn't quite carry the State in favor of the "Forty Thieves" clique, and 300 more would do it, post an agent off to St Croix, for instance, to return precisely 300 majority. 4th, In case of all the counties being exhausted without carrying the State, agent is directed to send down from La Crosse or St. Croix, the precise number lacking, as "supplementary returns," from a town that "had not got in when the original returns were forwarded."

The fact that these counties hadn't a dozen votes in them, and that the "supplemental towns" were myths, did not matter;—were not there the "returns" in black and white, regularly certified and sworn to? And could the canvassing officer go back of the record? The system, for a system it was, was a "dead sure thing," and kept the State in the breeches pockets of the "Forty Thieves" for years. But that and certain railroad speculations "busted" one fine day, and "Othello's (Berlah's) occupation was gone." That's how Berlah came to emigrate to this coast But Berlah, to this day, can't understand how an election can be carried without "frauds." If the Democracy had carried the State, Berlah would have been just as well satisfied that it had been done by "frauds," though he probably wouldn't have made so much noise about it.

We have received a couple of tickets for a "Ladies Fair and Strawberry Festival," to be held no doubt, at some definite time and place, but when or where, the handsome "Complimentary Tickets" do not inform us. The envelope which contained them bore a post mark, which of course was illegible. We fear we shall be unable to attend this "Fair and Festival," unless we can obtain some more specific information as to when it is to be held, and where Congressional.

WASHINGTON June 1 The Senate after a protracted debate passed by a vote of 31 to 15 the following bill amendatory of the act incorporating the Pacific Railroad

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled That the Union Pacific Railroad Company of the Eastern Division be authorized to designate the general route of their road and if the same be found to be in conformity with law at any time before December 1st 1866 and upon filing of said maps showing the general route the lands along the entire line through so far as it may be designated, shall be reserved from sale by order of the secretary of the Interior provided said company shall be entitled to only the amount of all kinds of lands of the United States to aid in the construction of their road as would have been allowed them had the said line connected with the Union Pacific Railroad on the 100th degree of longitude as now provided by law; and provided further, that the said company shall connect their line with the Union Pacific Railroad but not at a point more than fifty miles west from the meridian of Denver, Colorado The second section of the act therefor enacted that the Pacific Railroad Company, with consent and approval of the secretary of the Interior, are hereby authorized to locate, construct and continue their road from Omaha westward according to the best and most practicable routes without reference to the initial point on the one hundredth meridian of longitude west as is provided by law in a continuous line to the one until they shall meet and connect with the Central Pacific Railroad of California and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior, are hereby authorized to locate, construct and continue their road eastward in a continuous line to the one until they shall meet and connect with the Union Pacific Railroad; Provided that each of the above named companies shall have the right when by nature of the work to be done by reason of deep cuts and tunnels necessary to expedite the construction of roads to work to the extent of and not to exceed 200 miles in advance of their continuous and completed lines.

The above goes at once to the President and will be presented for early concurrence.

The Senate also passed the army appropriation bill adding thereto the House bill appropriating seven million of dollars for Freedmen's Bureau as an amendment

Mr. Garfield's bill creating a Department of Education, which was rejected last week, came up to-day in the House on the reconsidered vote and was passed without debate It provided for a Commissioner of Education with $4,000 per annum salary, and four clerks The duties of the department are simply to collect educational and other appropriations The bill goes to the Senate for concurrence

Mr Wilson of Iowa offered a resolution that the communication of the secretary of the Treasury, be referred to the committee on banking and currency, with instructions to inquire fully into all the circumstances

The committee presented the minority report of the reconstruction committee the main and substance of which is as follows In their judgment, so far from its being a profitless enterprise, it is a vital question of the continuation of States It was not admitted by these States when they entered the rebellion in violation of the Constitution, which was enough to justify the denial of their rights granted under the Constitution

The House took up the army bill and passed it, the debate being limited to two minutes speeches.

Mr Schenck explained that the bill proposes an army of 57,000 men, capable of extension to 70,000 He also stated that there would be fifty infantry regiments of ten companies each The bill provides further, that there shall be one General, one Lieut General, five Maj Generals and ten Brigadiers

The speaker of the House submitted a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, in answer to the resolution of inquiry, stating that between February 24 and 28d, he had sold through the assistant Treasurer which had employed Mr. Myer, $1,400 50, at a premium of from 41 and 42 to 37/8 cents, closing at the latter price The Secretary paid to Mr Myer, one-third of one per cent commission on the entire amount, except the last two days since January 13th, the Secretary has purchased $35,000 of ten-thirties, for which he paid $1 414,252 He sold between January 30 and May 15, $22,750 000 of five thirties, for which he received $23,436,349 in seven-thirties Jay Cooke & Co. were employed in the last operation, which resulted in a profit to the government of about $100,000 besides bringing above par the seven thirties, increasing the value of their securities and to prepare the way for a general funding of national securities

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—The different ward meetings called by the Union County Committees for the purpose of organizing Union ward clubs, were well attended so far as heard from, and everything passed off smoothly and harmoniously. The Union party will be united at the coming election. From the feeling manifested at different meetings last evening, there appeared to be no disposition to raise issues on questions of national politics, which might have the effect of dividing the party.

A letter from Alexander H Stephens, dated Crawfordville, 14th inst, says "I found all things in Washington, upon the whole, in as good condition, if not better, than I expected I have not from the beginning looked for anything from this Congress My only hope for the country is in the next fall elections in the North Should the President's policy be sustained in those, all may yet be well If not, to me the prospect of the future of this country, both North and South is gloomy indeed But from what I saw and heard at Washington, my hopes for a change next fall were greatly stimulated I am still hopeful in this view, but far from being sanguine"

"Have not," most deeply injured, but benignant and forgiving patriot, "looked for anything from this Congress!" Why, what can such as you, whose only remaining right is to go to the gallows, have been looking for? "Only hope for the country is in the next fall elections in the North!" The very language Mr Stephens, Vice President of the Confederation of traitors, used just previous to the fall elections of 1864 Next fall elections," you remarked, Mr rebel magnate Well, you and your fellow criminals have heard already of the election in Oregon, how much comfort do you all derive from that? Oregon has elected the first member of the Fortieth Congress, on the very issue of keeping Mr Vice President Stephens and his Confederate friends in retirement; or sending them to the gallows In September Oregon will elect a Senator, who will take the place of a "Conservative" gentleman now at Washington, and who will see to it that the half hopeful, half despairing Mr Stephens don't get anything more from the next Congress than he has obtained from this—unless possibly a felon's doom California will also have a true man there to take the place of Stephens' friend, Mc Dougall Not a Northern State will fulfill Mr Vice President Stephens' hopes next fall, and more than they did in 1864 The prospect isn't at all good for murderers, assassins and perjured traitors like the Hon. Mr Stephens Senator elect from Georgia, to get into Congress and rule over this much suffering and too long forbearing country

MEETING OF THE COMMON COUNCIL.—The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held last evening at 8 o'clock Mayor Ladd, presiding.

The following members were present: Messrs Gilmore Lownsdale, McCracken Rosenheim Stroudbridge, Thompson and Watkins

The records of the previous meeting were read and approved

City Marshal Rigby was instructed to have the Fire stuff on the Plaza repaired and painted and half-hydrants put before the Fourth day of July

An invitation of the I O O F, of Portland and Vancouver, for the Mayor Council and Fire department to attend an excursion on the Fourth of July, was laid on the table for action by the new board

A N King was granted a portion of Fifth and Washington streets for thirty days in building.

Messrs. Blanmer & Rosenblatt were granted a similar favor for the purpose of moving a building on First and Alder streets.

A communication of Chief Engineer Young, relative to Madison and First street hydrant, and the wants of Hook and Ladder Company, and Multnomah Engine Company was referred to the fire and water committee

Messrs T Stevens, H Pittock C Bills, Geo. V. Jackson and other owners of property on H street, petitioned for the improvement of that street in the same manner as the improvement done on Washington street.

Fifty feet of rubber (hydrant,) hose, were authorized for the Hook and Ladder Company.

The Health Committee reported that the cause of the deceased cow, hauled from the city by Mr. Bucky, had paid the expense of the same, relieving the Council of the unpleasant duty of rejecting the bill, which report was accepted.

City Engineer Burrage submitted an estimate of the global to cost of improving Salmon street by Mr Adam Long to be $1,619, which was accepted. The improvement is from the west line of First street to the east line of East Park street

The report of the city Recorder for June was submitted, showing $41 75 paid into the city treasury which was laid on the table

Warrants were ordered for payment of claims as follows: To the Judges and Clerks of the late general city election, J McVanse for side walks constructed in front of blocks 6 and 11, on First street, $270; Jos. Tooker, work at Engine House No 2, $130; O H Myers, work on lamp-posts, $43 10, C W. Burrage and assistants, services as surveyors for months of May and June, $787; Jos. Tucker, work at First Ward polls, $5, and house of Engine Company No. 2, $12, St Commissioner Simmons, $41 75; O S. N Company, bowling song puller, $25 J N Dolph, City Attorney, $250; C P. Ferry, City Treasurer, $250, T. B. Young, Chief Engineer, $125, S Simmons, Street Commissioner, $75, O H Myers, hydrants, lamp-posts and cisterns, $365 60

An ordinance appropriating $250 in payment of contractors for the improvement of Madison street, from the money now being collected for that purpose, passed.

An ordinance making an additional appropriation of $18 85 for the purchase and erection of street hydrants, passed

Council adjourned.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—An inquisition was held over the dead body of John B. Williams, yesterday, by Justice Hoffman. Several witnesses were examined, among whom was the woman Eliza J McMahon, about whom the case began. She testifies that she had been living at Mrs Lambert's about two weeks She came to this city from San Francisco on the 14th of May last She and Mitchell were intimate, and Mr Adolph testified that they had occupied the same bed-room at the Union Hotel on several occasions Mitchell was a frequenter of Mrs Lambert's dead-fall, and was there on the night of the 25th. Williams entered the place with a Mr. Cook, a teamster, and Cook testifies that after he had been there a short time, Williams and Mitchell got into language, and the latter said he would "rip out the guts" of the former At this Cook got up and took Williams from the house. Mitchell went to another room, and then followed them to the street, approaching with a knife, or something he took to be a knife. After making one pass at Williams, Cook knocked Mitchell down. He then got up and came with greater vengeance toward them, inflicting the wound from which Williams died. A post-mortem examination, made by Dr. Watkins yesterday morning, showed that the wound penetrated the abdominal walls, into the stomach, and through the coats of the stomach, on to the opposite side, terminating near the spinal column, being necessarily fatal. It was externally about 1¼ inches wide, and where it passed through the stomach was probably ¾ of an inch wide. The verdict of the jury was that deceased came to his death from wounds inflicted by a knife or some sharp instrument in the hands of one Edward Mitchell, on the night of June 25th, 1866, on the corner of Second and Yamhill streets in the city of Portland. The following named gentlemen composed the jury: F. W. Knapp, E. St. John, R. D. Duncan, Geo. M. Gilbert, A. O Bowen and N. Koshland. The case has already been brought before the present term of the Circuit Court.

"EXCELSIOR LIFE O. K."—The above very welcome intelligence was displayed upon the bulletin board at the telegraph office in this city yesterday morning. After a longer interruption than we have ever before had, since the wire was stretched across the Continent, and that too at a very important period in the financial affairs of the country, the news will of course be eagerly sought for, and will no doubt be found interesting. We shall give it all as it reaches us. The general fear of financial troubles at the East which would extend no little influence here, and which has retarded prudent merchants from buying, more than they absolutely required for immediate use, will now be more fully understood, as movements in trade circles can be governed with a perfect understanding. There was a time when we could get along without the aid of the telegraph, but in this day and age, as much as we may occasionally be inclined to regard the telegraph as a speculative agency, we see, and feel, and appreciate its worth to the community. Sales of spirits, tobacco, candles, tea, dry goods, boots, shoes, groceries, etc., will now be made in this market according to standard prices ruling East.

CIRCUIT COURT.—R. D. BEATTIE, Judge, Wednesday, June 27th, 1866. A. J. Knott and R. J. Ladd vs. A. L. Marshall and O. L. Silver, administrators of the estate of Caruthers deceased. Judgment in favor of plaintiffs for ——— on that portion of land known as the 23d claim Thomas claim, south of and adjoining the Courtenay land Claim.——Pierre Mollride vs. Marion E. Hyeling and Francis M. Culbertson. Judgment was rendered against Francis M Culbertson for the sum of $480, by default, and the jury returned a verdict in favor of Hosking for costs.....W. W. Chapman vs. the Board of Trustees of the Portland Academy and Female Seminary. Judgment in favor of trustees for possession of block 25 in the city of Portland.....State of Oregon vs. L. L. Pack, indicted for perjury. Jury empannelled.....An order was made directing the Sheriff to re-summon the Grand Jury, to inquire into crimes committed since their discharge, which was done, and the Jury presented an indictment against Edward Mitchell for murder in the first degree, on a charge of killing John B. Williams

A "NIGGER" TRADE.—A dark colored nigger who does whitewashing and general jobbing for his sweet liberty and subsistance in this city, was employed to do a job of cleaning in the hall of the building on the corner of Washington and Front streets for a stipulated price, which was paid him, but after the work was performed he demanded a larger sum, which was refused, and to "get even" he entered the Job Printing office of Wells & Co., where he made about ten pounds of printer's ink, of a shade about equal to his own complexion, with which he besmeared the walls and doors in a most shameful manner. The occurrance caused considerable agitation among the occupants of the building, some of whom soiled their coats before the outrageous proceeding was found out. Colgood was immediately lodged at the office of the City Marshal, and the nigger was last night playing a game of checkers with his sable mate through the iron grates of the Morrison street prison. He will have his examination to-day before Justice Hoffman, on a charge of maliciously defacing the walls of the premises, and if justice is done him, pay the full penalty of the law It will be a good lesson for the dirty scamp probably.

TREASURE SHIPMENT.—In addition to the amount of treasure previously reported as leaving by the steamship Oriflamme, yesterday morning, we have $86,000 of Montana dust, taken private by Mr. H. Bailey. The bulk of this shipment was deposited in the safe of Messrs. Keller, Frankenau & Co., while in this city, and it necessitated the removal of a portion of the books of the firm to make room for it. Two other shipments, not noted yesterday, amount to $13,000, making the total as follows:

Wells, Fargo & Co.....	$65,000
H. Bailey.....	56 000
Ladd & Tilton	30,000
Other parties.....	29,000
Total.....	$179,000

NEW CITY MAP.—Mr Burrage last evening submitted the new map of the city, now being made by him on an order of the Common Council, for inspection by the Board, and further orders. The map will be an excellent one, and is perfectly correct It embraces the full boundaries of the City proper, and a greater portion of the plot of East Portland, showing the Willamette river and the position of the blocks, fractional blocks, etc., just as they are. The streets of Portland are much better constructed than those of Boston, as may be seen by the map yet always are somewhat crooked. The new map is 39 by 42 inches in size

THE NEW GOVERNMENT.—This evening will be the first meeting of the new board of City Councilmen, at which time Mr. A. B. Hallock from the First Ward, Messrs Wm. Bennett and M. O'Connor from the Second Ward, and Messrs T J. Carter and J. C. Carson from the Third Ward, will take their seats. The saying is, that a "new broom sweeps clean," and we trust that the new board will necessitate the enforcement of the ordinance relating to the sweeping of the streets, or give us a Street Commissioner who will attend to the work without the necessity of instructions.

THE FIDELITER.—The steamship Fideliter, Capt Erskine, will sail to-day at 3 P M for Victoria, from Couch's wharf. We are not advised of the full amount of freight offering, but apprehend that it is not large and regret that this should be so The Victoria market is better for us by a great deal, than that of San Francisco, in many respects and we feel that to be assured of a means of transit to that port there should be a more liberal disposition to support The rates of fare to Victoria by the Fideliter are $20 in the cabin, and $10 in the steerage. Freight $8 per ton

THE SHIPPING.—The A and G street wharves were vacated yesterday morning on the departure of the Orifflamme from the latter, and the Montana from the former, but before noon the city per bark A A Eldredge, Capt M.A Abbott, fifteen days from Honolulu, with a cargo of sugar, coffee, etc, to Mc ers McCracken, Merrill & Co., filled one of the berths and the bark Jane A. Falkenburg, of San Francisco is hourly expected

WHEELER AND WILSON.—We are informed that those genius sewing machines are sustaining the pretty welfare gal system, are owned by proprietors who have licenses, procured before the law regulating that business went into effect. Those licenses all expire on the 30th of June, so we presume the dead-falls will collapse on the first of next month Mrs Lambert's institution is wound up.

PASSENGERS.—The Orifflamme yesterday morning carried away 125 passengers in the cabin, and 55 steerage, we are informed.

OREGON STAGE COMPANY.—Our fellow citizen, H W Corbett, Esq., will assume proprietorship of the Oregon and California Stage line on Monday next Both he and Mr E. Corbett are now out on the road to receive the stock, coaches, etc, from the old company, after which the line will be emphatically an Oregon concern We have great respect for our California friends, and feel willing to concede to them their superiority in many particulars over our less wealthy State, solely on the grounds of wealth but unless we are in error we think they will soon learn that in connecting Oregon solidly to them by an iron, steamship, or earth thread United States mails with safety and celerity Mr Corbett will find new concludes on the road wherever it is required and is prepared to transact the business upon at least to the standard the Calif rnia Company Mr H H Wheelhouse will continue to act in the capacity of agent at this city

HAIR CAUGHT.—Mr Barlow is again at his home in this city, somewhat in good health, but he bears a frightful scar on his cheek, inflicted by the desperado who attempted to take the lives of the passengers on the Oriental Coast some months since, accounts of which we have heretofore published in detail

RELICS OF JEFF DAVIS.—A pair of partly worn out ladies hoops were picked up near the telegraph office in this city, yesterday and it was supposed by the finder that they were some of the remains of Jeff Davies disguise outfit

FUNERAL OF MR WILLIAMS.—Mr. J R Williams, killed by Ed Mitchell, was buried at Mount Crawford yesterday afternoon, under the ceremonies of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows We believe he left family relatives in this country.

AUCTION SALE.—The excitement has not abated for buying new furniture at auction Theodore Levy will hold a large sale of new furniture at his rooms in front street this morning at 10 o'clock

THE RIVER.—After remaining at a stand for three days the river has fallen two inches in forty eight hours past

Aptly Illustrated.

The New York Times takes pains to inform the country that they have at Washington two "National Johnson Clubs," one purely Democratic, and the other professedly Republican The Times volunteers this information that the world may know that the "Johnson Club" at Washington, which is composed of Northern Copperheads, rebel Congressmen, &c., is not the only organization in that city which is devoted to "my policy." Montgomery Blair is President of the Democratic Club, and its orators are Souisbury, Hendricks, Rogers and other Copperheads of that character Their organ is the old National Intelligencer, and its editorial articles are understood to be generally submitted to President Johnson for his approval before their publication. The other "Johnson Club" at the National Capital is presided over by the First Assistant Postmaster General Its members are fewer in number than its rival can boast, but they have an organ in the National Republican to set forth their principles and plans. Each of these Clubs claims to be closest in the President's favor, and each tries to outdo the other in professions of undying devotion to his fortunes. Each has a different platform from the other, with entirely different principles; and of course, each claims to reflect the opinions of the President and to represent his views. This is an extremely happy arrangement. At one time the President comes out in favor of the doctrines of pure Copperheadism, and then Blair, Saulsbury & Co. are in high feather. At another time he seems to lean a very little toward "Conservative" Union principles, and then the rival Club is in high glee. The President can go on for some time yet agreeing perfectly with both; but orant ually he will have to choose between them and the principles they represent. Whichever way he goes, the choice will bring ruin upon him At present the two Clubs at Washington, with their different sets of principles, very felicitously represent Andrew Johnson in the two characters which he is endeavoring to personate. The illustration is perfect.

In his Doolittle and Johnson crusher of May 10th, Senator Nye quoted the following proposition from President Johnson, and made the appended reply

"A man who acknowledges allegiance to the Government and swears to support the Constitution, must necessarily be loyal"

There is the mistake. As a proposition, I deny it. Breckinridge took that oath while perjury black as hell was smoldering in his heart. The President of your late Confederacy has taken the same oath over and over again. Wigfall had taken it. Were they loyal? Sir, I deny the proposition that swearing makes a man loyal. If I could reconstruct the South to-day upon an oath, I would call them up and marshal them all together and bolt them to hold up their right hand and sweat. Why, sir these rascals have not only sworn to support the Government, but another, and they have broken both oaths Will you tell me now that swearing makes a man loyal? No. My friend from Pennsylvania yields that point, and when he yields it, everybody else must yield it.

I will not call names, but I chanced to be here in the early days of the rebellion, and I saw men shouting on the 22d of February who were not suspected of loyalty at that time. "Applause" What for? The test oath was to go. Oh! mere sophistication amounted to nothing! Let us inform the distinguished Senators from Wisconsin and Pennsylvania that fight there the gulf becomes as wide, as deep and as impassable as that between the rich man and Abraham's bosom. Right there I stop. I never will vote to let one of these rebels back here, on a simple oath to support the Constitution, to undo the ruins of power. Others may do as they please; but on the day of judgment, when I stand in judgment for the deeds done here, that sin shall not be placed to my account

COOLEST SPOT IN THE CITY.—ELLSWORTH & CARDWELL can safely say that their Photograph Gallery, 89 First Street, is the coolest and most comfortable place in town. Sitters for PICTURES at this GALLERY are noted for the pleasant expression of their countenances; which may be owing to the above important fact.

My Playfellow

What though you're only five years old
A little rough and ruddy sapling fairy
And I'm a man of gravity and toil—
We're comrades true—my little Mary!
We're friends and playmates—love and I and
And unless I'm much mistaken
I'd warn you that I'll steal the show,
We'll laugh and laugh, and romp together!

We'll romp among the grass
The dewdrops shake, in valley
Or play at merry hide-and-seek
Behind the trees or rustic alleys
And listen to the cricket's call
Or count the crops of meadow daisies
And then we'll go and pick
In all the glorious colt pictures

And I will watch the butterfly
Until my pulse runs sailing lightly
And I will run when I let him free,
Or try to decide if he's right or wrong
Also but I we teach the dog to beg,
And little puss to frisk and caper?
And don't I point your birds and fish,
And cast your purses out of paper?

And I will spin my humming top
Together in the parlor table
And I will pour father call the fool
And smile to notice such a fable!
And don't I tell you fairy tales
Of interest on your mother?
And don't you kiss me when I've done
And ask me to begin another?

And don't you sit, with hands outstretched
And eyes that shine like sunlit fountains,
Pretend you love me big as trees
Big as the wild and all its mountains
And don't you sometimes fall asleep
In kissing me and quite worn and weary?
And don't I carry you to bed,
And dream for your peaceful, my Mary?

All you and we're friends and companions true,
Through each light and shadow of our years
I think the world was dark without you
And if to forswore your life,
However time and fate may vary
I'll wish no better friend than you
My little laughing, romping Mary.

Wine as It Is.

[From Chambers's Journal.]

It would perhaps be rash to assert that the old motto, in vino veritas, deserves no faith whatever but certainly experience goes greatly against the belief that there is any truth in the wine of modern days. For anything we know to the contrary matters may have been just as bad in the days of the Lucullases—nay, even the gods themselves may have been cheated in their Nectar. But we do know, that while the British public are every day becoming more of a wine drinking people—and probably just because they are becoming so—the adulteration of wine is as very day practiced to a larger extent, and brought to a greater perfection. Genuine wine can no doubt be obtained, and—as it happens, too, wine of the most wholesome sort, and at comparatively low prices. But it all happens that this class of wine has not yet cut the latter general favor in England. That the higher priced wines mostly in demand must be taken largely on trust—as to genuineness, we think we can have very little difficulty in showing.

Sherry is probably the wine most in demand in this country, but any dealer who knows his trade, and whole reasonably disposed to be honest, must frankly allow that we are far more indebted to Africa than to Spain for the wine that passes under the name of sherry. According to tolerable trustworthy authority, it is in proof that fully three-fourths of the article sold in this country as sherry is really nothing more than common Cape wine, cleverly concocted to suit all tastes. The cost of Cape wine is low enough, as any one may ascertain, but cheap as Cape wine is, we have heard of even a cheaper basis for the manufacture of a good palpable sherry. Cider which sells sometimes at as low-priced as six cents a gallon, when the orchard produce has been found to answer admirably, in skillful hands, is a liquid out of which sherry may be made. To deprive the Cape wines and the cider of acidity, gray salt, potash and lime are used, and to clarify them, white of eggs, isinglass, or bullock's blood fresh from the slaughter house; indeed, for the very common sorts of wine, horse's blood is more frequently used. Body is given to the article by the use of Foster's neutral spirit—a perfectly colorless and strong spirit or wine. For the basis of Port wine, the common red wine of Spain is extensively used; though latterly, since French wines have been admitted at a low duty, the commoner sorts of claret have been brought into use in the manufacturing process, cleanness and body, being attained by the same methods as are applied to the perfecting of sherry. Apparently, port wine is an article of consumption that must be doctored to suit the British palate, for even the very best, as imported direct from Portugal, has to be largely adulterated with brandy to make it saleable in our markets.

But it is in the flavoring and coloring of the different sorts of port and sherry, that the greatest skill and taste are shown. Here, however, chemistry steps in to aid the wine merchant, and not only relieves him of the trouble of research, but takes all the drudgery of preparation off his hands. The initiated in London are aware of the visits of an individual at certain establishments, whose sole stock in trade consists of sundry not very large bottles, containing liquids of various colors. Morning or early forenoon is his time for doing business, and the transactions are generally for ready money, with few questions asked or answered. This is the dealer in essences, and the essences play an all-important part in wine making. Essence of elephino gives a dryness and color established. Essence of black currants produces both body and richness of flavor—much esteemed in good port wines—and expressed juice of Orleans plums is found to answer the same purpose. A solution of tannin in spirits gives the requisite astringency and true sherry flavor to Cupownines such as Captain Wegga proposed to introduce into common use as "a good dinner sherry, at 13 shillings a dozen, bottles included." For the costlier, brown sherries, a very superior wine called Color, worth perhaps about £100 per butt, is sparingly used for the purpose of giving color, and [illegible] burnt sugar, also [illegible] object. Palm oil dissolved in spirit [illegible] rich golden color to sherry; and almond paste produces a fine nutty flavor, which flavor can also be obtained by nitro-benzole—the latter article being largely used in flavoring cheap sherries. We will not pretend to say that we can name all the ingredients used in the "doctoring" of our drinks, for there may be mysteries within mysteries; but we know that in addition to the articles just mentioned, salt, common sugar, capsicums, grains of Paradise, sulphuric acid, cream of tartar and glycerine play their parts in adding flavor, and in producing oiliness, crustiness and body, in the liquids we are asked to consume as port and sherry.

There could be no greater mistake than to suppose that adulteration is confined to wines most commonly consumed in England. We are not sure indeed but that the adulteration of champagne is carried to even a greater extent than the adulteration of port and sherry. It is only a short time since that a suit in the Court of Queen's Bench arising out of a dispute in connection with some stock-wrecks, disclosed the fact that champagne that will fetch a guinea a bottle on the race-course, need not cost the retailer more than 30s a dozen. We are not in any great degree a champagne-drinking people, yet a learned counsel on the trial just alluded to, maintained that there is more of this particular wine consumed in England in one day than is produced in all France in the course of 20 years. This is only another mode of telling us that we don't get the real article, but of course we all know that; yet it is made a point of honor in some countries to stand up for the genuineness of the champagne they consume. In the Pall Mall clubs it would be rank heresy to hint a doubt of the sparkling vintage. Russians will swear that out of the capital of the Czars on the Neva, you have but very little chance of ever tasting the genuine product of the champagne vineyards; in California they are quite convinced that they have the very best of undoubted Moet and Chandon, while the New Yorkers would think a man mad who could dream of questioning the fact that the only real Veuve Clicquot is to be had at Delmonico's. All cannot be right in asserting that they alone have a monopoly of the drink so much in repute, though we think there can be no doubt that the Russian has the best chance of tasting the genuine article. It is stated on good authority, that, with the exception of what is retained by the French court for its own use, and for sending as presents to crowned heads, there is a standing agreement, that all that is left of the celebrated Clicquot vintage shall be sent to the Russian Government. How the rest of the world is supplied with its champagne, only a small portion of the world really know. Germany supplies a large portion of what is sold as the best champagne, and Moselle wine deprived of the peculiar flavor of the muscatel grape, from which it is said to constitutes an excellent sparkling drink, such as may very well satisfy those who have no chance of ever seeing a bottle of unimpeachable champagne decanted. But champagne may be made of almost any beverage that will ferment and effervesce, and, in fact, we fear it is made of every liquid that can be made to bubble and sparkle for the period demanded in the drinking of it sugar candy carbonate of soda, and the requisite colorings and flavorings play their part in the sophisticating of the desired drink. From goose berry, from marigold-wursel, and from rhubarb good champagne may be concocted, elder, berry, mead, maple syrup, and even spruce-beer, have been used, and used largely, in the manufacture. There is no occasion for the rhubarb used in the making of champagne being fresh, for excellent judges have owned that they have been deceived with wine of this description made from very stale rhubarb. If proper skill is displayed in the flavoring, and needful care bestowed upon the racking, we really do not see how the general public can be expected to judge accurately of what they are drinking, when connoisseurs are occasionally known that they are deceived. That to boil, pink tissue paper and meat but showy lubula have much to do in recommending of any wine is a fact the dealer knows well, if he does not acknowledge it. I et an honest man try to sell race course champagne in ginger beer bottles at a moderate profit on his outlay, and it is very doubtful indeed if he could persuade the public to give him more than the price of ginger beer for it.

But enough of this to know, and as many proofs of the false character of the wines in common consumption as that is really sound true and wholesome wine may be had at a price far below the adulterations now patronized by the public. The best medical testimony concurs in telling us that no better beverage can be consumed than the light clarets of France, and France is prepared to supply us with an unlimited quantity of sound claret at a price that almost precludes adulteration. The British public, it is true, has to acquire its taste for this wine, but, judging by the rapid increase in the quantity imported since the treaty of commerce, we are not without hope that we shall one day change wine as it is for wine as it ought to be.

Origin of Uncle Tom's Cabin.

The Atlantic Monthly, for June contains an article giving a biography of Dr. Bailey, late editor of the National Era, formerly published in Washington City. In this very interesting article we find the origin of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The editor of the article headed "A Pioneer Editor," gives the origin of this remarkably popular work as follows:

But this is not all that is to be said of the Era. To that paper belongs the honor of introducing to the world the story of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Although reference has frequently been made to the origin of this wonderful fiction, the facts of its inception and growth have never been given to the public. Those are so curious, that we are happy to be able to present what politicians would call the "secret history" of this book. The account was furnished to a friend by Dr. Bailey himself, when about to embark for Europe, on his first voyage for health, in 1853; the manuscript, now used for the first time, was hurriedly penned, without expectation of its appearance to print, and therefore has all the dashing freedom which might be looked for in a communication from one friend to another. We give it verbatim that it may serve for a sole cause, as well as a contribution to the literary history of the time.

"In the beginning of the year 1851, as my custom has been, I sent remittances to various writers whom I wished to furnish contributions to the Era, during that volume. Among these was Mrs Stowe. I sent her one hundred dollars, saying to her that for that sum she might write as much as she pleased, when she pleased, and when she pleased. I did not dream that she would attempt a novel, for she had never written one. Some time in the summer she wrote me that she was going to write me a story about 'How a Man became a Thing.' It would occupy a few numbers of the Era, in chapters. She did not suppose or dream that it would expand to a novel, nor did I. She changed the title to 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and commenced it in August. I read two or three of the first chapters, to see that everything was going on right, and read no more than. She proceeded—the story grew—it seemed to have no end—everybody talked of it. I thought the mails were so irregular, for none of my subscribers was willing to lose a single number of the Era while the story was going on. Mrs. Bailey attracted my attention by her special devotion to it, and Mr Chase always read it before anything else. Of the hundreds of letters received weekly, renewing subscriptions or sending new ones, there was scarcely one that did not contain some cordial reference to Uncle Tom. I wrote to Mrs. Stowe, and told her that, although such a story had not been contracted for, and I had, in my programme, limited my remittance to her to one hundred dollars, yet, as the thing had grown beyond all our calculations, I felt bound to make her another remittance. So I sent her two hundred dollars more. The story was closed early in the spring of 1852. I had not yet read it; but I wrote to Mrs Stowe that, as I had not contemplated so large an outlay in my plans for the volume, as the paper had not received as much pecuniary benefit from its publication as it would have done could my readers have foreseen what it was to be, and as my large circulation had served as a tremendous advertisement for the work, which was now about to be published separately, and of which she held the copyright alone, I supposed that I ought not to pay for it as much as if these circumstances had not existed. But I simply stated the case to her—submitted everything to her judgement—and would pay her additional just exactly what she should determine was right. She named one hundred dollars more; this I immediately remitted. And thus terminated my relations with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' but not with its author, who is still engaged as a regular contributor to the Era. Dr. Snodgrass is hereby commended to Mr. Clophane [Dr Bailey's clerk] who is authorized to hand him any letters he wishes Mrs. Stowe and myself that may aid him in his undertaking."

The European Complications.

The well informed London correspondent of the New York Times, writing under date of May 5th, thinks there will be no war after all. His speculations are interesting if not prophetic. He says:

"It may be that Prussia and Italy, with the concurrence of France, are about to destroy Austria—that the other Powers will divide her as Poland was divided. Russia will get Austrian Poland and the Danubian Provinces. Italy gets Venetia. Hungary becomes independent, and the head of a great Sclavonic Confederacy. Prussia takes the Duchies and rules Germany, while France gets the boundary of the Rhine, Belgium and the Island of Sardinia. This is what some people think is on the cards. I do not believe it. Austria has too much vitality for that; and if France will really remain neutral, and secure the neutrality of the other Powers, England and Russia, I believe that Austria, with the aid she will have from friendly German States, can whip Prussia with the one hand and Italy with the other.

Of course, this is only my opinion, I am quite aware that it is not the common one in America, or in England. The English—a certain class at least—have strong Italian, Garibaldian and Mazzinian sympathies. A good many Americans are of the same way of thinking, and it is natural that most Germans in America should take the side of Prussia. But Prussia has a small population compared with Austria, and is a flat country, destitute of strong military positions. Austria has a large military population—it has the sympathy of Bavaria, a strong military State, and has strong military positions on both frontiers. Let Italy and Prussia attack simultaneously, and, in my opinion, both would be beaten. Prussia has a certain amount of partisan disaffection at home, and the jealousy of some of the smaller States. Italy has a reactionary party and interests large enough to be dangerous.

Italy, it is declared on the highest authority in Paris, has promised not to attack Austria. Austria has no thought of attacking Italy. Prussia will not attack Austria without the assurance of the concurrence of Italy. How, then, can there be war? But while France declares for peace, asserts its own neutrality, and its freedom of action—while it declares that it will hold any nation responsible that breaks the peace of Europe we have at the same time all Europe in a ferment, and immense preparations for war. The Italian Government has made its financial deposits now, and we are told that the movement of troops is an affair, not of days but of hours. All this is very perplexing, and what can we do but wait for a result no one seems able to foresee.

My present impression is that these difficulties will grow more and more threatening, until the apprehensions of war have become so general and disastrous that people will want peace, and that at the proper moment the Emperor Napoleon will renew his proposition for a Congress; and that the whole matter will be settled at Paris. This will place him at the head of Europe, and fulfill his saying—"the Empire is peace." It is agreed that not an army can move in Europe against the Imperial vote. Every one looks to the Emperor for peace or for war. If there is a war he will be blamed for it, and it will be attributed to some sinister motive. If he really have the power to preserve peace, why should he not do it, and if he wishes the aggrandisement of France a Congress would give him as much as he might gain from a war.

I have looked the matter all over, and I can make no better guesses than I have made. The feeling is war. The reasonable hope is peace."

SPECIMEN BRICKS.—WHAT CAUSED RIOTS.—Those who desire to know, says the Memphis Post of May 11th, what caused the late massacres and the nature of the feeling existing among those who claim to be the most loyal, the most noble and chivalrous people here, will find some food for reflection in the following extracts from the leading editorial of the Memphis Avalanche of yesterday. It says:

"As terrible and lamentable as the late riots here have been in their results, they have taught our enemies at least one lesson, viz: in our social status under the black hearted fanatic of New England nor the Dutch skinned fanatic of the South can rule the white men of this part of the Union. There is no misunderstanding this, and we do not hesitate to avow our joy that the Radicals have learned at least that much of self government. We earnestly opposed the election of Stephen A. Douglas to the Presidency, but he is the author of one phrase that is as popular with all good Americans as it is true. He often said 'this is a white man's Government.' It is true and that truth has lately been vindicated in a way likely to leave a lasting impression upon the minds of all who witnessed it.

The negro no longer attempts to rule in Memphis. The negro troops have all left our city, and 'order reigns in Warsaw.' We never had riots here until the advent of those negro troops and the Nigger Bureau, and if they had never come riots would not have come. Those troops have gone, and a general wish is expressed that they could have carried off with them the Bureau plan of the Nigger Bureau. Another lesson still has been taught the white fanatics, at least. It is that we want none of their 'white mariner' among any of our population, white or black. It is said they have all left in a great fright. A happy riddance we have. They were nuisances. Women who would come down south to teach negroes are unfit companions for any but negro society. The South never learned anything from New England. The Pharisaical religion, the morals, the "isms" of that land of hickory hams and wooden nutmegs, have never obtained a foothold among us, and never will. Those isms are sprouts to be planted among us by these 'schoolmarms' and the South will rejoice when the last one of them has left us.

It is hardly necessary for us to say that among these 'schoolmarms' we do not include so many intellectual, polished and amiable women from the North who have been among us for years, as teachers in some of our first schools and colleges. They are not fanatics. They are not affected with the unfortunate distemper called 'nigger on the brain,' and they would ornament any society. But we do most sincerely rejoice that the "strong minded (?) women who have been teaching the young negro idea how to shoot (?) have left us. We trust they will conclude Memphis is an unhealthy."

Perhaps the jubilant negro hater will moderate his exultation when he learns that the "school marms" are coming back with a reinforcement and that orders to Government officers here are to protect them with all the force at their command. The colored school houses are to be rebuilt without further delay—one hundred laborers being engaged for the purpose. The colored churches are also to be reconstructed, and the city of Memphis is to bear the burden of expense. If the citizens of Memphis choose to support newspapers which by their teachings incite Indemnitarism, they must pay for their costly luxury. It is very certain that every building destroyed here by mob violence must be paid for by the city.

What if ugh you're only five years old,
A little rough and romping Cozy
And I am a man of fare and fold—
My heart reminded me—my little Mary!
We recit wide miles laying at a stride and find
And I—does Fifty wonder together
Of days gone by, 'tis all the same,
We laugh and laugh and run together!

We play I call upon the grass
To wander days, in shady valleys,
Or play at merry hide and seek
Behind the trees in garden alleys
And I—as I wander I—that no
Of [illegible] crops of meadow daisies
Or hunt the many grassh spots
To all the gay and safe retreat places

And I and I recall the butterfly
With ready pinions sailing lightly
As I also you, when I let him free,
Leave by [illegible] I used slightly?
And don't we touch the dog to beg,
As I little puss to frisk and caper?
And don't I paint your birds and fish,
And eat your purses out of paper?

And I can I see spin our humming top
I get or in the parlor table?
And I on I your father call me fool
And scuffle to utter such a fable!
And don't I tell you fairy tales
At intercession of your mother?
And can't you kiss me when I se done,
And ask me to begin another?

And don't you oft, with hands outstretched
And eyes that shine like sun lit fountains,
Protest you love me "big as trees,
Big, as the world and all its mountains"
And then you scamper full asleep
Locked in my arms quite worn and weary?
And I don't I carry you to bed,
Too drowsy for your prayers, my fairy?

Oh yes we recite nds and comrades true,
There's not a bit of guile about you;
You shed such light all at your path
I'd think the world was dark without you
And if, to fourscore years I live,
However time and fate may vary,
I'll wish no better friend than you
My little laughing, romping Mary.

Wine as it is.

[From "Chambers's Journal."]

It would perhaps be rash to assert that the old motto, In vino veritas, deserves no faith whatever but certainly experience goes greatly against the belief that there is any truth in the wine of modern days. For anything we know to the contrary, matters may have been just as bad in the days of the Lucullases—nay, even the gods themselves may have been cheated in their Nectar. But we do know, that while the British public are every day becoming more of a wine drinking people—and probably just because they are becoming so—the adulteration of wine is every day practised to a larger extent, and brought to a greater perfection. Genuine wine can no doubt be obtained, and as it happens, too, wine of the most wholesome sort, and at comparatively low prices. But it all happens that this class of wine has not yet come into general favor in England That the higher priced wines mostly in demand must be taken largely on trust as to genuineness, we think we can have very little difficulty in showing.

Sherry is probably the wine most in demand in this country, but any dealer who knows his trade, and who is reasonably disposed to be honest, must frankly allow that we are far more indebted to Africa than to Spain for the wine that passes under the name of sherry. According to a tolerable trustworthy authority, it is in proof that fully three fourths of the article sold in this country as sherry is really nothing more than common Cape wine, cleverly concocted to suit all tastes. The cost of Cape wine is low enough, as any one may ascertain, but cheap as Cape wine is, we have heard of even a cheaper basis for the manufacture of a good palatable sherry. Older which sells sometimes at as low a price as six cents a gallon; when the orchard produce has been found to answer admirably, in skillful hands, is a liquid out of which sherry may be made. To deprive the Cape wines and the cider of acidity, gray salt, potash and lime are used, and to clarify them, white of eggs, isinglass, or, bullock's blood fresh from the slaughter house; indeed, for the very common sorts of wine, horse's blood is more frequently used. Body is given to the article by the use of Foster's neutral spirits—a perfectly colorless and strong spirit of wine. For the basis of Port wine, the common red wine of Spain is extensively used; though latterly, since French wines have been admitted at a low duty, the commoner sorts of claret have been brought into use in the manufacturing process, clearness and body being attained by the same methods as are applied to the perfecting of sherry. Apparently, port wine is an article of consumption that must be doctored to suit the British palate, for even the very best, as imported direct from Portugal, has to be largely adulterated with brandy to make it saleable in our markets.

But it is in the finishing and coloring of the different sorts of port and sherry that the greatest skill and taste are shown. Here, however, chemistry steps in to aid the wine merchant, and not only relieves him of the trouble of research, but takes all the drudgery of preparation off his hands. The initiated in London are aware of the visits of an individual at certain establishments, whose sole stock in trade consists of sundry not very large bottles, containing liquids of various colors. Morning or early forenoon is his time for doing business, and the transactions are generally for ready money, with few questions asked or answered. This is the dealer in essences, and the essences play an all-important part in wine making. Essence of sloe juice gives a dryness and color combined. Essence of black currants produces both body and richness of flavor—much esteemed in good port wines—and expressed juice of Orleans plums is found to answer the same purpose. A solution of tannin in spirits gives the requisite astringency and into sherry flavor to Capewines such as Captain Wegge proposed to introduce into common use as "a good dinner sherry, at 13 shillings, bottles included." For the costlier, brown sherries, a very superior wine called Color, worth perhaps about £100 per butt, is specially used for the giving color, and [illegible] sorts, caramel, or burnt sugar, effects the same object. Palm oil dissolved in spirit gives the rich golden color to sherry; and almond paste produces a fine nutty flavor, which flavor is also obtained by nitro-benzole—the latter article being largely used in flavoring cheap sherries. We will not pretend to say that we can name all the ingredients used in the "doctoring" of our drinks; for there may be mysteries within mysteries; but we know that in addition to the articles just mentioned, salt, common sugar, capsicums, grains of Paradise, sulphuric acid, cream of tartar and glycerine play their parts in adding flavor, and in producing oiliness, crustiness and body, in the liquids we are asked to consume as port and sherry.

There could be no greater mistake than to suppose that adulteration is confined to wines most commonly consumed in England. We are not sure indeed but that the adulteration of champagne is carried to even a greater extent than the adulteration of port and sherry. It is only a short time since that a suit in the Court of Queen's Bench, turning on a question of damage in connection with some stock, revealed the fact that champagne that will fetch a guinea a bottle on the race-course, need not cost the retailer more than 30s a dozen. We are not in any great degree a champagne-drinking people, yet a learned counsel on the trial just alluded to, maintained that there is more of this particular wine consumed in England in one day than is produced in all France in the course of 20 years. This is only another mode of telling us that we don't get the real article, but of course we all know that; yet it is made a point of honor in some countries to stand up for the genuineness of the champagne they consume. In the Pall Mall clubs it would be rank heresy to hint a doubt of the sparkling vintage. Russians will swear that out of the capital of the Czars on the Neva, you have but very little chance of ever tasting the genuine product of the champagne vineyards. In California they are quite convinced that they have the very best of undoubted Moet and Chandon, while the New Yorkers would think a man mad who could dream of questioning the fact that the only real Veuve Clicquot is to be had at Delmonico's. All cannot be right in assorting that they alone have a monopoly of the drink so much in repute, though we think there can be no doubt that the Russian has the best chance of tasting the genuine article if it is stated on good authority, that, with the exception of what is retained by the French court for its own use, and for sending as presents to crowned heads, there is a standing agreement, that all that is left of the celebrated Clicquot vintage shall be sent to the Russian Government. How the rest of the world is supplied with its champagne, only a small portion of the world really know. Germany supplies a large portion of what is sold as the best champagne, and Moselle wine deprived of the peculiar flavor of the muscatel grape, from which it is made constitutes an excellent sparkling drink, such as may very well satisfy those who have no chance of ever seeing a bottle of unimpeachable champagne decanted But champagne may be made of almost any beverage that will ferment and effervesce and, in fact, we fear it is made of every liquid that can be made to bubble and sparkle for the period demanded in the drinking of it Sugar oxide carbonate of soda, and the requisite colorings and flavorings, play their part in the sophisticating of the desired drink. From goose berry, from mangold wurzel, and from rhubarb good champagne may be concocted; cider, berry, mead, maple syrup, and even spruce-beer, have been used, and used largely, in the manufacture. There is no occasion for the rhubarb used in the making of champagne being fresh, for excellent judges have owned that they have been deceived with wine of this description made from very stale rhubarb It proper skill is displayed in the flavoring, and mouthful care bestowed upon the racking we really do not see how the general public can be expected to judge accurately of what they are drinking when connoisseurs are compelled to own that they are deceived That to boot, pink champagne paper and neat but showy labels have much to do in recommending champagne, is a fact the dealer knows well, if he does not acknowledge it. Let an honest man try to vend race course champagne in ginger beer bottles at a moderate profit on his outlay, and it is very doubtful indeed if he could persuade the public to give him more than the price of ginger beer for it

It is comforting to know, amid a many proofs of the false character of the wines in common consumption that a really sound true and wholesome wine may be had at a price far below the adulterations now patronized by the public The best medical testimony concurs in telling us that no better beverage can be consumed than the light clarets of France and France is prepared to supply us with an unlimited quantity of sound claret at a price that almost precludes adulteration The British public, it is true, has to acquire the taste for this wine, but, judging by the rapid increase in the quantity imported since the treaty of commerce, we are not without hope that we shall one day change wine as it is for wine as it ought to be

Origin of Uncle Tom's Cabin.

The Atlantic Monthly, for June, contains an article giving a biography of Dr. Bailey, late editor of the National Era, formerly published in Washington City In this very interesting article we find the origin of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" The editor of the article headed "A Pioneer Editor," gives the origin of this remarkably popular work as follows

"But this is not all that is to be said of the Era. To that paper belongs the honor of introducing to the world the story of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Although reference has frequently been made to the origin of this wonderful fiction, the facts of its inception and growth have never been given to the public Those are so curious, that we are happy to be able to present what politicians would call the "secret history" of this book. The account was furnished to a friend by Dr. Bailey himself, when about to embark for Europe, on his first voyage for health, in 1853; the manuscript, now used for the first time, was hurriedly penned, without expectation of its appearance in print, and therefore has all the dashing freedom which might be looked for in a communication from one friend to another We give it verbatim, that it may serve for a sermon, as well as a contribution to the literary history of the time

"In the beginning of the year 1851, as my own firm has been, I sent remittances to various writers whom I wished to furnish contributions to the Era, during that volume Among those was Mrs Stowe I sent her one hundred dollars, saying to her that for that sum she might write as much as she pleased, what she pleased, and when she pleased. I did not dream that she would attempt a novel, for she had never written one. Some time in the summer she wrote me that she was going to write me a story about 'How a Man became a Thing.' It would occupy a few numbers of the Era, in chapters She did not suppose or dream that it would expand to a novel, nor did I. She changed the title to 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and commenced it in August I read two or three of the first chapters, to see that everything was going on right, and read no more then She proceeded—the story grew—it seemed to have no end—everybody talked of it I thought the small sale of subscribers, for none of my subscribers was willing to lose a single number of the Era while the story was going on. Mrs. Bailey attracted my attention by her special devotion to it, and Mr Chase always read it before anything else Of the hundreds of letters received weekly, renewing subscriptions or sending new ones, there was scarcely one that did not contain some cordial reference to Uncle Tom I wrote to Mrs. Stowe, and told her that, although such a story had not been contracted for, and I had, in my programme, limited my remittances to her to one hundred dollars, yet, as the thing had grown beyond all our calculations, I felt bound to make be another remittance. So I sent her two hundred dollars more The story was closed early in the spring of 1852. I had not yet read it; but I wrote to Mrs. Stowe that, as I had not contemplated so large an outlay in my plans for the volume, as the paper had not received as much pecuniary benefit from its publication as it would have done could my readers have foreseen what it was to be, and as my large circulation had served as a tremendous advertisement for the work, which was now about to be published separately, and of which she held the copyright alone, I supposed that I ought not to pay for it so much as if those circumstances had not existed. But I simply stated the case to her—submitted everything to her judgement—and would pay her additional just exactly what she should determine was right. She named one hundred dollars more; this I immediately remitted. And thus terminated my relations with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' but not with its author, who is still engaged as a regular contributor to the Era. Dr. Snodgrass is hereby commended to Mr. Stephens [Dr Bailey's clerk], who is authorized to hand him any letters between Mrs. Stowe and myself that may aid him in his undertaking."

The European Complications.

The well informed London correspondent of the New York Times, writing under date of May 5th, thinks there will be no war after all. His speculations are interesting if not prophetic. He says

"It may be that Prussia and Italy, with the concurrence of France, are about to destroy Austria—that the other Powers will divide her as Poland was divided. Russia will get Austrian Poland and the Danubian Provinces. Italy gets Venetia. Hungary becomes independent, and the head of a great Sclavonic Confederacy. Prussia takes the Duchies and rules Germany, while France gets the boundary of the Rhine, Belgium and the Island of Sardinia. This is what some people think is on the cards. I do not believe it. Austria has too much vitality for that; and if France will really remain neutral, and secure the neutrality of the other Powers, England and Russia, I believe that Austria, with the aid she will have from friendly German States, can whip Prussia with the one hand and Italy with the other.

Of course, this is only my opinion, I am quite aware that it is not the common one in America, or in England. The English—a certain class at least—have strong Italian, Garibaldian and Mazzinian sympathies. A good many Americans are of the same way of thinking, and it is natural that most Germans in America should take the side of Prussia. But Prussia has a small population compared with Austria, and is a flat country, destitute of strong military positions. Austria has a large military population—it has the sympathy of Bavaria, a strong military State, and has strong military positions on both frontiers But Italy and Prussia attack simultaneously, and, in my opinion, both would be beaten Prussia has a certain amount of partisan dissatisfaction at home, and the jealousy of some of the smaller States Italy has a reactionary party and interests large enough to be dangerous

Italy, it is declared on the highest authority in Paris, has promised not to attack Austria Austria has no thought of attacking Italy, Prussia will not attack Austria without the assurance of the concurrence of Italy. How, then, can there be war? But while France declares for peace, asserts its own neutrality and its freedom of action—while it declares that it will hold any nation responsible that breaks the peace of Europe we have at the same time all Europe in a ferment, and numerous preparations for war The Italian government has made its financial dispositions, and we are told that the movement of troops is an affair, not of days but of hours. All this is very perplexing, and what can we do but wait for a result no one seems able to foresee.

My present impression is that these difficulties will grow more and more threatening, until the apprehensions of war have become so general and disastrous that people will want peace, and that at the proper moment the Emperor Napoleon will renew his proposition for a Congress and that the whole matter will be settled at Paris This will place him at the head of Europe, and fulfill his saying—"the Empire is peace." It is agreed that not an army can move in Europe against the Imperial veto Every one looks to the Emperor for peace or for war. If there is a war he will be blamed for it, and it will be attributed to some sinister motive If he really have the power to preserve peace, why should he not do it, and if he wishes the aggrandizement of France a Congress would give him as much as he might gain from a war

I have looked the matter all over, and I can make no better guesses than I have made. The feeling is war The reasonable hope is peace."

SPECIMEN BRICKS—WHAT CAUSED RIOTS.—Those who desire to know says the Memphis Post of May 11th, what caused the late massacres and the nature of the feeling existing among those who claim to be the most loyal, the most noble and chivalrous people here, will find some food for reflection in the following extracts from the leading editorial of the Memphis Avalanche of yesterday It says:

"As terrible and lamentable as the late riots here have been in their results, they have taught our enemies at least one lesson, viz: in our social status neither the black hearted fanatics of New England, nor the blue skinned tyrants of the South can rule the white men of this part of the Union There is no misunderstanding this, and we do not hesitate to avow our joy that the Radicals have learned at least that much of self government We earnestly applaud the election of Stephen A Douglas to the Presidency, but he is the author of one phrase that is as popular with all good citizens as it is true He often said 'this is a white man's Government!' It is true, and that truth has lately been vindicated in a way likely to leave a lasting impression upon the minds of all who can read it

The negro no longer attempts to rule in Memphis The negro troops have all left our city, and "order reigns in Warsaw!" We never had riots here until the advent of these negro troops and the Nigger Bureau and if they had never come, riots would not have come Those troops have gone, and a general wish is expressed that they will have carried off with them the whole present race of Freedmen Bureau-ites and Yankeedom still has them taught the white fanatics, at least It is true that we want none of their school marms' among any of our population, white or black It is said they leave all left in a great fright. A happy riddance we have They were nuisances Women who could come down South to teach negroes are unfit companions for any but negro society The South never learned anything from New England The Pharisaical religion, the morals the "isms" of that land of huckery hams and wooden nutmegs, have never obtained foothold among us and never will Those isms' are sprouts to be planted among us by these schoolmarms," and the South will rejoice when the last one of them has left us

"It is hardly necessary for us to say that among those 'schoolmarms" we do not include many intellectual, polished and amiable women from the North who have been among us for years as teachers in some of our first schools and colleges They are not fanatics They are not allested with the unfortunate distemper called "nigger on the brain" and they would ornament any society But we do most sincerely regret that the "strong minded (?) women who have been flocking the young negro idea how to shoot (?) have left us We trust they will conclude Memphis is an unhealthy"

Perhaps this jubilant negro hater will moderate his exstacies when he learns that the "school marms" are coming back with a reinforcement and that orders to Government officers have been to protect them with all the force at their command The colored school houses are to be rebuilt without further delay, one hundred houses being engaged for the purpose. The colored churches are also to be reconstructed, and the city of Memphis is to bear the burden of expense If the citizens of Memphis choose to support newspapers which by their teachings incite indomitation, they must pay for their costly luxury. It is very certain that every building destroyed here by mob violence must be paid for by the city
